To Whom It May Concern:

I have been a real estate developer and investor living in San Francisco for over 35 years. During this time, I have owned and developed many high-end residential projects and several commercial properties. I have known and worked with Homy Sikaroudi over the past many years and have hired his company to complete construction work on several of my residential properties, including a substantial seismic retrofit of a large and very prominent church building.

My business has always been based on purchasing good properties and finding cost effective solutions in developing to these properties to their highest potential. In working with Homy I have always found him to be skilled, professional and creative not only for my company's investment and development projects, but also in the work he has done for several of my developer friends.

I consider Homy a great engineer, contractor and good friend whom I can highly recommend.

Sincerely,

Mark Nelson
